

I know that copyright has been on a lot of people's minds recently. I have found the following sites which may help you find images that are legal to use..

I have quoted the web address for each and an extract from the licence terms but please make sure if you are going to use an image from any of these sites, you, yourself personally read the full terms of the licence. I take no responsibility for any legal action resulting from your use of these sites. This is not meant to be threatening, scary or ducking my responsibilities, but all of them do have images that are sponsored and have restrictions, and there are those (surely not our members!) who plough on regardless without being clear about those restrictions.

This restricted content is easy to identify, and if you stray into that part of the website and pick an image and open it there is a statement about its use somewhere on that page. Please find it and read it. Watch out for Shutterstock and Adobe which both have sponsored content.

All photos published on Unsplash can be used for free. You can use them for commercial and noncommercial purposes. You do not need to ask permission from or provide credit to the photographer or Unsplash, although it is appreciated when possible.

More precisely, Unsplash grants you an irrevocable, nonexclusive, worldwide copyright license to download, copy, modify, distribute, perform, and use photos from Unsplash for free, including for commercial purposes, without permission from or attributing the photographer or Unsplash. This license does not include the right to compile photos from Unsplash to replicate a similar or competing service.

This is a bit more complicated as it includes sponsored content which may have copyright restrictions - but it is easily identified on the website - and Creative Commons Zero (CC0) material. Images and Videos on Pixabay are made available under the Pixabay License on the following terms. Under the Pixabay License you are granted an irrevocable, worldwide, non-exclusive and royalty free right to use, download, copy, modify or adapt the Images and Videos for commercial or non-commercial purposes. Attribution of the photographer or Pixabay is not required but is always appreciated.
